

Institutional Assessment Structure

This page describes the structure of institutional assessment at Geneseo, of which academic assessment is but one part.

Geneseo's institutional assessment structure feeds information from programs, offices, departments, and committees to groups or individuals responsible for oversight at the unit level (Academic Affairs, Advancement, etc.) and from there to a College Assessment Council.

The council responds downstream to unit-level oversight groups and reports upstream to the Strategic Planning Group, which uses the information for both its ongoing review of college goals and objectives and its formulation of recommendations to the Budget Committee.

The structure is designed to ensure that the activities of programs, offices, departments, and committees inform and are informed by planning and budgetary decisions.

Graphically, the structure might be represented like this:
