past, or passing, or to come.

It seems as if Yeats is referring to a bird when he says "or set upon a golden bough to sing to lords and ladies of Byzantium of what is past, or passing, or to come." And that this bird is telling stories to the people of Byzantium about the past present and future.